

The Second Judge Mark R. Kravitz Symposium on the Administration of Justice

“Dollars, Sense and the High Cost of Litigation: Causes, Consequences and Responses”

Quinnipiac University School of Law
North Haven, CT
March 6, 2015

In 2012, the Connecticut Bar Foundation James W. Cooper Fellows held the inaugural Judge Mark R. Kravitz Symposium on the Administration of Justice in honor of the late Judge Kravitz. The topic of that symposium was “The Vanishing Trial,” which was the subject of both a published article by Judge Kravitz and his keynote speech at the Connecticut Bar Foundation Annual Reception in 2005.

This year’s symposium will explore one of the legal profession’s most pressing issues: the high cost associated with the delivery of legal services. Financial barriers frequently preclude individuals from accessing the judicial system, which impedes lawyers from litigating and judges from adjudicating meritorious cases. This symposium will discuss the impact that costs have had on the traditional trial system and the role that alternative fee arrangements and other initiatives designed to increase judicial economy will have in shaping the future of the legal profession. Members of the bench and the bar will share their perspectives on ways that attorneys and judges can collaborate to manage costs beginning at the initial stages of the litigation process.
